Strategy

Purpose

The purpose of this document is to address the needs of the Wild Wonders website. To accomplish the organization's goals, their site needs to be clean, organized and encourage people to learn about animals and get involved. This document proposes a way to meet those needs.

Strategy

In order to define the strategy of redesigning the site, we first had to do a little research. A big part of our research was the class interview we did with Sarah. We combined all of our notes to get a good feel of what the new website needed to accomplish. We found that the number one goal of the website is to increase business with the animal events in order to get the word out about the organization. This goal can be accomplished by providing a lot of good information about the organization on the site. The secondary goal that we have with this website is to make it an informative place kids can go and learn about animals.

Strategy Continued

After analyzing our interview notes and looking at all of our research, we created five personas to represent the target audience. We feel that the primary user will be the student because of the numerous project opportunities this organization provides. However, volunteers and donors are also important to this organization.

After more analyzing and researching, we have concluded that Mandy the mom is our primary user. Mandy will visit the site often to look up information about the events and activities that wild wonders has. Mandy has been the main customer of wild wonders and it would make sense that a site that helps her out would help the business succeed.

Profile

Mandy was born to a low income family with parents that routinely neglected their children. This served to make her aware of those who go without; and those that just need someone to love and encourage them through tough times.

She married her High School sweetheart young and immediately started a family. Her husband dropped out of college after getting his associates to work full time to support his family. He has slowly moved up the corporate ladder through putting in longer hours than everyone else. While they can now live comfortably; he has to continue to put in long hours to maintain their lifestyle.

She works part time at a bank, in order to be able to have all the things her children could need. Her main goals and dreams are to work hard and have her children grow up and be successful.

Her greatest fear is losing her relationship with her children; and having it turn into a relationship of disinterest and contempt that she has with her parents.

"Your work is to discover your world and then with all your heart give yourself to it."

Business Goals

Scenario

Mandy begins her day by looking at her calendar on her phone looking for the things that she needs to get done before she has to go into work. Scrolling through her to do list she is reminded that her son's birthday is coming up in four weeks and that this year he has been asking for a party with his friends from school.

It's been a week and Mandy is now even busier than ever, her reminder for the party pops up on her phone, she can't believe that the time is passing by so quickly and she starts to get stressed out about planning a party for 30 little kids. Frustrated she turns to Google really quickly for ideas on how to plan a birthday party.

After a few minutes of fruitless searching she finds an idea that bringing animals to a party is really fun for kids and adults as well. Mandy remembers something that her friend at work told her about her nephew's birthday party, on how

Wild wonders was the name of the place that brought animals to play with the children, she said. So Mandy did a quick search for wild wonders and found the website. She was extremely worried about finding out whether there was enough time for them to come to the birthday party even though it was 2 weeks out. Luckily Mandy was able to find on the site with one click the times that wild wonders would be able to come by. The prices of to the side weren't half bad either she thought.

Setting up the time for them to come was a cinch! Mandy was able to quickly request the hours and the day she wanted wild wonders to bring the animals.

Finding all of the information about how wild wonders worked in one location was really helpful for her and Mandy really wanted to share the news at work because she knew her coworkers would want to know about this great idea as well.

Someone on the board mentions that they love animals and that it might be fun to do something with animals this year. Buzz volunteers to take what they have discussed and look into it more before their next meeting takes place.

Back in his office Buzz starts searching online search. He likes the idea of doing something with animals since he also loves animals. His search leads him to the Wild Wonders website and he starts learning more about what they do. He likes that they will come to their location and also sees that they accept donations and thinks this would be a great way to accomplish the desires discussed in the planning meeting. They could have some fun educational entertainment with animals and also donate with their charity budget to Wild Wonders for this year. Title:	The Volunteer
Priority:	Low /Level 3

Scenario

After starting a new job and moving to a new city, Vanessa is finding herself wanting new ways to get involved in the community, give back, and spend her free time in a meaningful way. She asks a few friends at work if they know of any cool places to volunteer but gets to usual answers (United way, Habitat for Humanity, LDS cannery etc.). None of these places sound exciting to her. She decides to go home and start Googling volunteer opportunities in Utah County. She is directed to a few different sites but nothing sparks her interest. She thinks more about what she would really like to do and thinks about how fun it would be to volunteer at the animal shelter. She starts Googling different animal keywords and ends up finding the Wild Wonders website.

She is totally surprised that there is an exotic animal sanctuary so close to her home! She quickly checks out the homepage, sees a slide show of a number of interesting animals, and immediately clicks on the "Get Involved" tab. She wears a big smile when she sees in bold letters "Come Volunteer with us!", accompanied by a photo of some 20-30 year old volunteers smiling with a fox. She scrolls down and is happy to see a text box that says "Interested in volunteering?

Send us your name, number, and possible meeting times and come meet the animals!" She eagerly fills out her name, number, and a comment saying "I would love to come check out your facilities! I am free Thursday's and Saturday's." The message is send directly to Sarah's email.

The next day Sarah gives Vanessa a call. Sarah expresses her gratitude for Vanessa's desire to help the animals, and sets a time for Vanessa to come visit to facility. When Vanessa arrives on Saturday morning, Sarah gives her a tour, answers many questions, and let's her interact with a few of the animals. Vanessa is really enjoying herself. Sarah explains more about what volunteers do and gives her a few options as to what she would like to focus on. Vanessa loves foxes so she decides that she would like to come every Saturday morning, clean the fox stalls, feed, and walk them. Sarah gives her a simple, non overwhelming task so Vanessa feels confident she can accomplish it over a good period of time. After volunteering for just 3 weeks, Wild Wonders ends up doing an event for Vanessa's work where Sarah is able to net-work with other like minded people. She gets more volunteers, more recommendations, and more events as her multiple volunteers and clients spread the word. The Wild Wonders facility also begins to make improvements since there are more helping hands. Vanessa volunteers with Wild Wonders for the next year and a half and is responsible to connecting Sarah to many clients and extra volunteer help.

Wally is usually considered the life of the party. He loves getting people together to do fun, unique things. He regularly takes girls out on dates, and always makes an effort to find something different, rather than the boring dinner and a movie. His weekends are usually full of road trips, rope swings, day hikes, camping, bon fires, and game nights. He is always ready to try something new, but struggles to come up with ideas.

"I am always looking for new, fun activities!"

Name:	Wally Davis
Title:	The Weekender
Priority:	Low /Level 3

Scenario

Wally finally gets the courage up to ask Jenny, a girl in his accounting class, out on a group date. He schedules it for this weekend and quickly texts a few of his room mates to get them in on the date. The next night they all talk about what they could do with their dates. One says "I think we should go see Batman vs. Superman, and then go out to eat after". Wally hates this idea. He really likes this girl and doesn't want to bore her with a date she has already been on a thousand times. Wally pitches a couple ideas like riding the lift at Sundance, doing the skydive wind tunnel, and going to Lagoon, but all his ideas are shut down because they cost too much. He tells them to give him one day to come up with an idea.

Business Goals

We want Wally to:

- Have the potential client call
- Feel like they would be welcome to visit
- Make it look very fun and engaging for a group
- Have client set up an appointment now
- Have client be comfortable with the price

Wally gets on Google and types in "fun date ideas in Provo", but turns up empty. He calls a few friends to see if they have any ideas, but still nothing. The next day he was chatting with one of his friends about his upcoming date and told them how much Jenny loves animals. Wally's friend say's "I have the perfect date idea!", and tells Wally all about Wild Wonders. A few months earlier his friend had gone to Wild Wonders while helping out his niece's school for a field trip. During the visit, the tour guide mentioned that people were always free to visit as long as they called ahead of time. Wally lit up, and Googled Wild Wonders immediately on his iPhone. After seeing some great images of interesting animals and checking the price and hours, he clicked the "Call Us" button. Kindly greeted by a Wild Wonders employee, Wally set up the visit for that Saturday. Wally sent the URL of the website to his 2 roommates, and they were thrilled as they scrolled through images of the animals they will be able to see.

The group date went amazing. Jenny especially loved how much she was able to interact with the animals and snapchatted the whole experience. Wally was happy that he was able to stand out, and provide a unique and memorable date. Jenny agreed to a second date, and even said how she wants to bring her nieces and nephews next month.

"My son is my world, I want to give him the best birthday party he's had but I also want him to learn from this experience."

Site Map & Wireframes

Site Map

The site map was designed to offer a simple yet effective layout that would be best suited for our personas. Our personas shared a common goal of being able to access the website for certain features such as donating, volunteering time or access to the animal gallery.

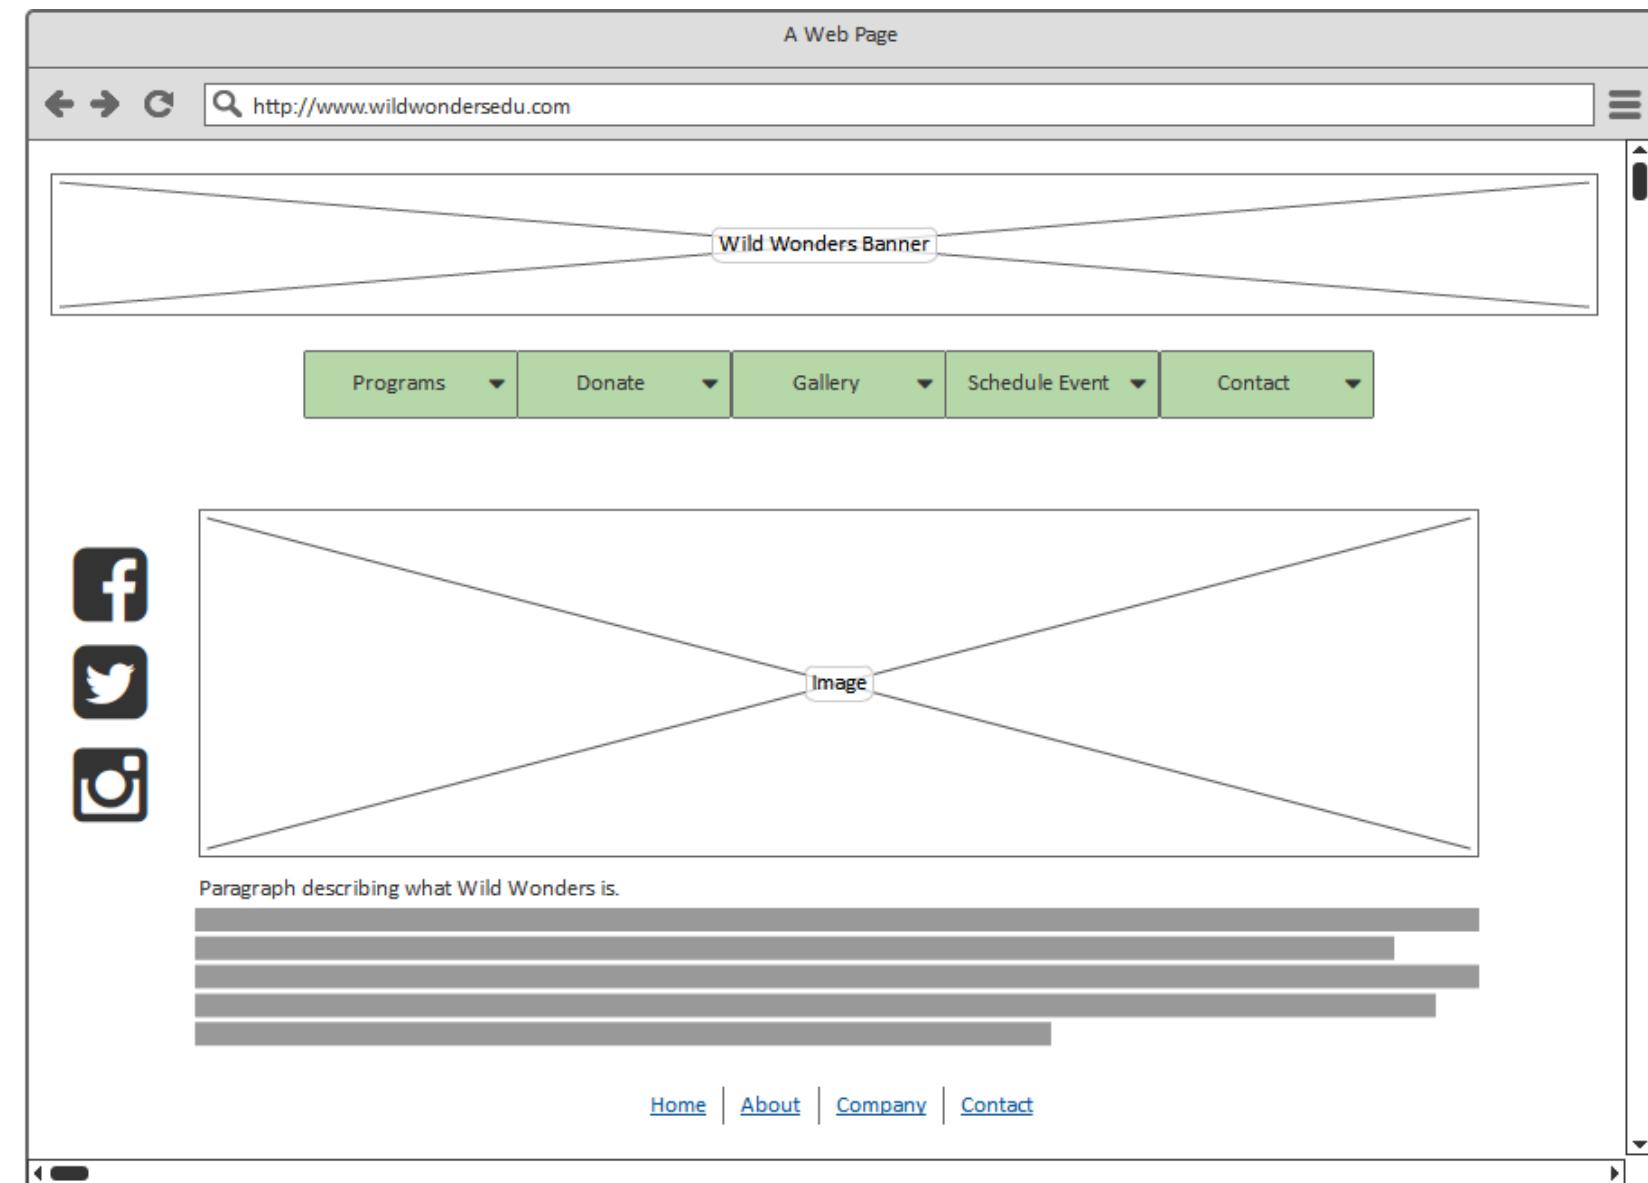

In order to meet these goals, we felt it necessary to place these features in the navigation menu for easy and quick access. Also, the social media panel is another feature that we felt would benefit from being placed on the landing page.

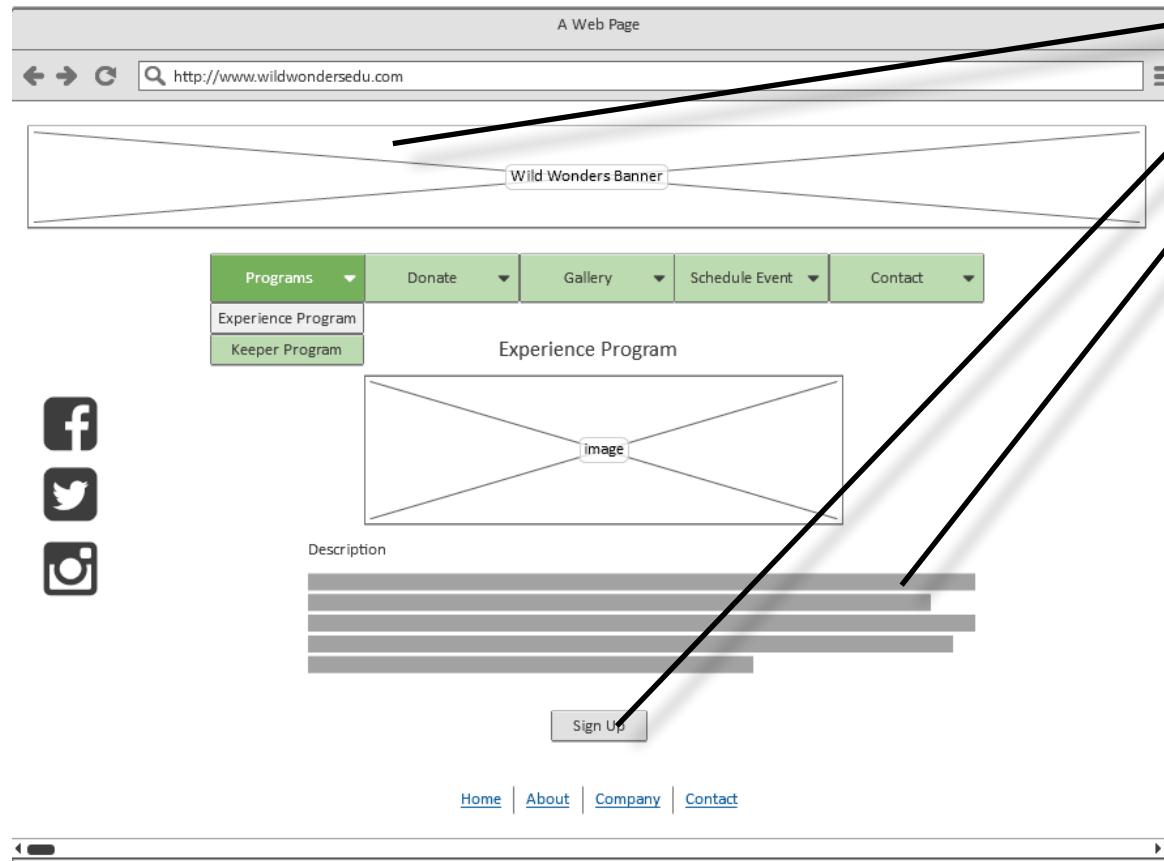

Wireframes

The landing page will display a large banner at the top in order to reinforce the Wild Wonders brand. Also, a large image placed front and center featuring animals housed at Wild Wonders should encourage the user to investigate the website further in order to pursue a more extensive gallery of the animals.

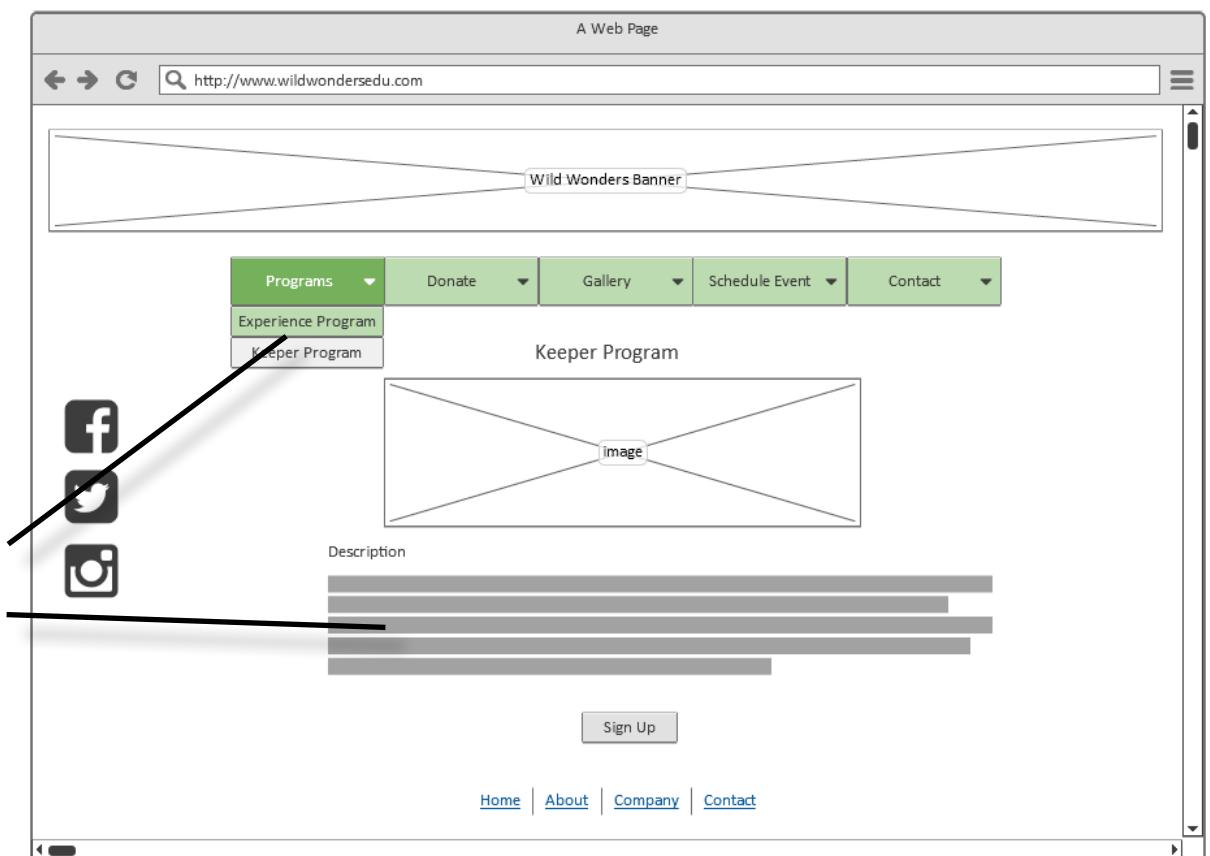

The landing page is meant to capture the user's attention and should offer a professional look and feel as well as present an inviting atmosphere.

Experience & Keeper Programs

Usability Test Plan

Goals :

To evaluate the necessity of items and products on the webpage.

Measure :

The main measure we used to see if the site was reaching its goals were to give people certain tasks to complete and time how long it took them to complete them. We picked people that closely matched our personas to get the best data and results possible.

Usability Tasks :

1. Email Wild Wonders
2. Schedule a corporate event
3. Donate money to Wild Wonders
4. Enlarge a photo in the gallery
5. Learn about the keeper program

Test Results :

Task	User 1	User 2	User 3	User 4	User 5	User 6
1. Email Wild Wonders	5	6	6	8	5	6
2. Schedule a corporate event	9	11	9	15	8	5
3. Donate money to Wild Wonders	12	17	11	20	13	5
4. Enlarge a photo in the gallery	7	10	4	8	5	3
5. Learn about the keeper program	8	9	7	17	6	5

Recommendations :

Our group has put in a lot of time into doing this usability study for the redesign of Wild Wonder's website. People mostly wanted to go to the site to learn more about Wild Wonders and what they do. Our findings show that keeping things small and precise, users are better at finding the results they want.

The site is easy to navigate and everything is very easy to find. The solution that we have creates a website that is user friendly for adults and for kids. The usability tasks that we created helped us understand how quickly new users were able to browse and learn about the site. Most everyone that took the test found the answers pretty quickly and felt like results satisfied the questions that they had. This redesign of the site could by far increase the usability of the website if implemented, and we would recommend that Wild Wonders do so.

Color :

As Sarah mentioned before the feel that she needs for her website should be an earthy, fun, and professional atmosphere.

Color is an important part in the way things look and feel, in order to bring to life this document and this website we implemented the use of these colors
